Joan Frederick is a photographer, teacher, historian and a native Texan living in San Antonio TX but was raised in Oklahoma, “The Land of the Red Man”. Her photography centers on the culture of modern Native Americans and occasionally profiles her adopted homeland, the Latino world of San Antonio. Her two dimensional photos transform the flat image into conceptual drawings or portraits similar to holograms, and her latest work pushes photography into 3-dimensional sculptures using water, light, refraction and assemblage. Her focus is to take traditional photography and transform it into modern art. Joan’s website: www.joanfrederick.net
